The Integrity Blog

Keep Looking for the Good

I am sorry for not staying on top of our blog. We have been busy, which is a good thing in these market conditions. A lot has happened since our last posting - new President, Harvey, and the Astros have a shot at making history tonight. There are many people who thought these events would never occur. For better or worse, unexpected things happen every day...

Vulnerabilities at your Facility

With in-house capabilities shrinking and responsibilities growing, we know that getting everything done at work may be hard to handle right now.

I am originally from a small town outside Atlanta, Georgia, but I have called Houston my home for over 17 years. I have a crazy-funny husband, Clay, and four kids who keep me on my toes. I recently joined Cognascents after spending the last several years running a very busy household. Prior to Cognascents, I worked in commercial real estate and banking, serving various roles - one of which was sales and marketing. I am thrilled to be a part of the Cognascents team and look forward to expanding my horizons and growing our PSM business reach.

process safety services, environmental services, and technical training solutions that leverage our rare combination of technical problem-solving skills and integrity.

Ascent to a higher standard of excellence is only possible after achieving cognizance of one's own strengths and vulnerabilities. This dynamic (ever-changing) state of existence is "cognascents".
